Roof Replacement & Pool Building Renovation

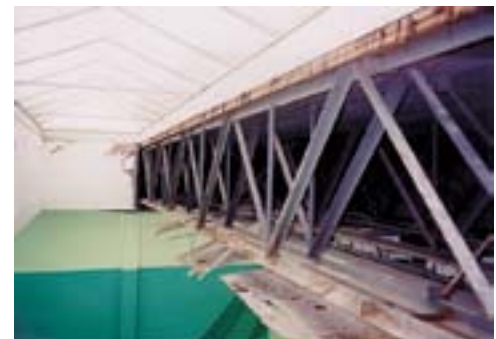

New lighting was designed for maximum visibility into the water, creating a safer environment for students

On January 8, 1998 a 45-foot long section of plaster skylight well, along with sections of the ceiling tile, unexpectedly collapsed into the pool. Bell & Spina was called to investigate.

The resulting project included:

- lighting
- acoustical treatments
- humidity control
- structural reinforcing of the exterior walls
- general change of character for the pool facility

Acoustic ceiling left unsupported before construction

The project necessitated setting up an elaborate scaffolding structure, including many underwater supports installed by scuba divers, as the pool could not be drained.

Bell & Spina worked around the constraints of the project to produce a low maintenance, state-of-the-art facility.
